NATURE, OUTDOOR EXPLORATION AND SKILLS

Beginner Bird Identification Class

The pandemic's newest hot hobby has a catch: you must learn how to identify little fluffy things that zip quickly through the air! Designed for people who enjoy birds, but can't tell one from another just yet, this class will provide a low-key and judgement-free environment in which students can build foundational skills in bird identification. Whether you want to pick up a new pastime, or finally learn what it feels like to be a Pokemaster, but IRL, this birding class is for you. NOTE: This course will be taught via a combination of online classes and in-person walks. The online classes will take place on Wednesday evenings at 6:30-7:15pm on Zoom. Students will need access to a computer that has a built-in camera or a smart phone. During each 45-minute class, students will have the opportunity to ask questions and practice identification. Optional homework will be assigned to present easy-to-do DIY activities that reinforce learning. Two in-person birding walks will be offered on Saturdays to allow students to practice bird ID in Rock Creek Regional Park with coaching from the instructor.
